Agustin Schang is an architect, curator and creative cultural producer based in New York. Since 2013 he is the Curator in Residence and Programs manager at the Emily Harvey Foundation. Previously he was based in Buenos Aires, where he was the Architecture Director of Festivales de Buenos Aires, the leading Public Cultural Festivals Program in Latin America, where he planned, designed, organized and managed venues, exhibitions and projects for more than 20 major cultural events in the city of Buenos Aires in various disciplines as independent cinema, emerging rock music, contemporary dance, international theatre, and jazz music. Schang studied architecture at the University of Buenos Aires, where he served as an Adjunct Assistant Professor. He graduated in 2015 from the M.S. in Critical, Curatorial and Conceptual Practices in Architecture at Columbia University GSAPP (New York) with a thesis on archives and architecture. His thesis Towards the Event, Arranging Objects explored through a performatic art work and exhibition the particularities of one of the most renowned artists cooperative based in the 537 Broadway building in SoHo NY.
